

Sources of Teaching Materials on Globalization

Source	Description	Location
Global TeachNet	Offers a listserv on global ed opportunities and lesson plans, a section that has kids from diverse countries introduce themselves to elementary students, and lesson plans for high school students and above.	http://www.rpcv.org/pages/globalteachnet.cfm
AskAsia.org	Offers separate sections on Asia for kids, students and teachers. The latter has 66 lesson plans, 121 background essays, 107 maps, and 629 annotated images.	http://www.askasia.org/
Exploring Africa! (MSU African Studies Center)	Provides an entire middle/high school curriculum on Africa--20 modules on such topics as African Economies, African Music, and Exploring Africa's Diversity.	http://exploringafrica.matrix.msu.edu/
united nations cyberschoolbus	Draws students into global studies with competitions, campaigns, interactive data explorations, etc.	http://cyberschoolbus.un.org/
The Southern Center for International Studies (SCIS)	Publishes the World in Transition Series —10 multimedia kits on different regions of the world. Their videos and instructional guides are largely aimed at high school students.	http://www.southerncenter.org/
Watson Institute for International Studies (Brown University)	See the Current Issues Series of their Choices Program . It includes texts and lesson plans on such topics as Mexico at the crossroads, the U.S. response to a changing China, and searching for solutions in Iraq.	http://choices-education.stores.yahoo.net/cuisse.html
The Center for Teaching International Relations (University of Denver)	Publishes books of teaching activities on global issues, areas of the world, geography topics, etc.	http://www.du.edu/ctir/pubs_why.html
Stanford Program on International and Cross-Cultural Education (SPICE)	Publishes supplementary curriculum materials on international issues and their historical and cultural underpinnings.	http://spice.stanford.edu/
The American Forum for Global Education	Publishes print and online materials that focus on world regions and global problems.	http://www.globaled.org/
Coverdell Worldwide Schools (Peace Corps)	Offers lesson plans, podcasts, a speakers' bureau and numerous other ways to connect students to the work of Peace Corps volunteers.	http://www.peacecorps.gov/www/